In computer science, real-time computing (RTC), or reactive computing describes hardware and software systems subject to a "real-time constraint", for example from event to system response. Real-time programs must guarantee response within specified time constraints, often referred to as "deadlines". The correctness of these types of systems depends on their temporal aspects as well as their ...

In your experience, how often does your audio application have to compete for CPU time with other regular system processes? You can attempt to do as much “scheduling” within your own thread (or perhaps a thread pool within the same address space), but sometimes the system (as a whole) has other things to do than just schedule your own application.
